Gender Tension Gap Program (GTG)

GENDER TENSION GAP: A NEED FOR APPLIED RESEARCH

Women and men face dilemmas and sometimes guilt when they make choices that seemingly breach the rules that society imposes on their gender.

Research shows that female middle managers are not gravitating to positions of leadership in large part due to the dilemmas they face in overcoming their beliefs and values, which not only affect them individually at the professional level, but also as a group and the way the group is perceived by the organization.

Furthermore, research has identified internal barriers and tension gaps that prevent women from pursuing their careers in full, although further work is needed to help understand where those barriers come from, as well as tools for raising awareness and offering training to help women find ways to overcome those barriers.

The Gender Tension Gap Indicator is a major contribution towards equality in organizations

GENDER TENSION GAP PROGRAM

In today's world, the ability to manage multiple capacities in multiple business models is essential. Complex and diverse organizations require new approaches to managing difference, beyond traditional diversity management.

Companies can benefit from new strategies in these increasingly complex times through fresh ideas and a more holistic approach to diversity, including a new gender paradigm that must be integrated and leveraged into current management practices.

During its fourteen years of existence, the Center for Diversity in Global Management of IE Business School has accumulated expertise and knowledge through research and program management in diversity in organizations. This acumen has led to the generation of a new model of understanding the unconscious biases that prevent women's full participation in business life. Through applied research we plan to materialize this through a tool that will respond to the needs of those companies at the forefront of managing diversity.

The Gender Tension Gap Program proposes practical research to help eliminate motivational barriers that prevent women from attaining positions of leadership by suggesting individual and collective solutions

A. Definitions

GENDER EXPECTATIONS

Normative expectations about behaviour within a specific context (personal / professional life)

TENSION

Stress caused by the contrast between where we are (present gender expectations) and we should be (aspirational gender expectations)

GAP

IE Center for Diversity

IE Foundation supports the activities from the Center for Diversity, whose main purpose is to promote the management of gender, cultural, age and skills diversity as a competitive advantage in today's corporate world.

The Centre's main aims are to foster a greater understanding of the demand for and needs of corporate diversity, by analyzing the improvement in bottom line results and effectiveness of inclusion policies; to improve diversity in the corporate world by promoting training programmes in management in minority groups both in western companies and developing countries, thus promoting the integration of women into the economic fabric; and to generate debate and the exchange of experiences in the field of diversity.

The Center's objectives are essentially achieved via training, research and awareness-raising activities as well as activities designed to foster international debate. Its international activities include supporting women in different cultures with a view to improving their integration into the productive fabric.

JUAN PERPIÑÁN. DIRECTOR QUAVITAM CONSULTING

Regarding my skills, I first contacted technology and the information systems when I was young. I managed to combine my first IT year at Universidad Politécnica de Madrid with my first job as a programmer at the Ministerio de Asuntos Exteriores. Once I finished my degree and this first stage at the Ministerio as Data Centre Director, I joined a consulting company with French headquarters, then Swedish and finally started working for Price Waterhouse, not yet converted into Coopers. Here I have the opportunity to work in London for a year, on my way to become a partner in the firm.

Meanwhile, Price Waterhouse changes its strategy and new partners join the firm. I found myself not too involved in the new style and this was the reason why I left the firm and created my own consulting company.

This is when I took my first steps into the design and development of technological platforms, and is now my current company: Quavitam. This platform allows the deployment of online managerial systems, and it is designed to work both with any language and many type of company, integrated with other solutions and can be connected from any device.
